

The Diploma in English Law and Legal Skills (“DELLS”) is a unique course organised at the Faculty by the British Law Centre (BLC).

The British Law Centres (BLC) were established in 1992 as a joint venture between the University of Cambridge and the University of Warsaw. They are now run by a dedicated educational charity (Juris Angliae Scientia), based at Cambridge University’s Law Faculty. There are numerous BLCs throughout the CEE region.

The Diploma teaches selected aspects of English law (constitutional law, contract law, tort law, trusts law) whilst also helping you to develop a range of core legal skills including: legal writing, contract negotiations; contract drafting, oral advocacy, mooting and other skills that are crucial to anyone planning a career in the law.

The Diploma is delivered in a practical and interactive manner by an experienced and professional team of native English-speaking lawyers and academics. Whether you wish to practise as a lawyer or simply improve your written and spoken English whilst developing a range of other skills, the BLC helps to make your career goals a reality.

Fuller details of the Diploma course can be seen on the British Law Centre’s webpage at www.britishlawcentre.co.uk/Wroclaw or by clicking on the green button in the presentation below.

The number of points granted by OIRP will be corresponding with the exact number of hours of the whole programme (2 points per hour).

The number granted by ORA will amount to 6 points for the meetings in 2020 and in the year 2021 successful completion of Diploma course will be considered as fulfilment of the professional excellence obligations for 2020 (they will be granted the required number of points in the year 2021).

In order to confirm that the same points-awarding arrangement continues to exist in the academic year in which you will begin the Diploma, you should speak directly to ORA/OIRP as appropriate in your case.
